1929 Ross Mosque
Hwy 2 & 87th Ave NW, Ross, ND 58776, USA

The first mosque constructed in the United States was on a remote prairie in North Dakota. It was built around 1929 by Syrian-Lebanese immigrants near the tiny town of Ross, according to historians, and was constructed as a sub-basement to shelter it from wind and cold. It was small – about 111 square meters – and contained a coal stove as well as benches and a rug. Spiritual leaders came from Canada or Minneapolis for a few weeks, living temporarily with Ross families, to teach and hold services. The Muslims in Ross had planned to complete an above-ground building but were unable to do so because of their economic difficulties during the Great Depression.
